

eToro adds Solana to investment platform

October 12, 2021: eToro, the global multi-asset investment platform, announced today that it has added Solana (SOL) to its crypto offering⁽¹⁾, bringing the number of cryptoassets available to 32⁽²⁾.

SOL is a scalable crypto token created for the Solana blockchain. It has a very high transaction speed, making it capable of almost 50,000 transactions per second. Investors in Solana are chosen to become proof-of-stake holders based on the number of SOL tokens that they hold.

“The long term potential of crypto is clearly a concept that is now widely accepted and the interest in crypto from both institutional and retail investors continues to grow exponentially.” said Doron Rosenblum, VP of Business Solutions at eToro. “Adding Solana further broadens our range of cryptoassets, offering our users even more opportunity to diversify their portfolios. Naturally, we urge investors to do their research, to be cautious and remember that when investing, it is wise to diversify and only invest in markets and instruments with which you are familiar.”

eToro has been offering retail clients access to the crypto markets since 2013. eToro’s users can easily buy, hold and sell the real underlying asset of SOL on its investment platform, using fiat currency.

Solana is the latest coin to join eToro’s cryptoasset range following the addition of Filecoin (FIL) and Polkadot (DOT) earlier in the month, as well as Enjin (ENJ), Maker (MKR) and Shiba Inu (represented on eToro as SHIBxM) in July, and Chainlink, Dogecoin, Uniswap, Aave, Compound, Yearn.Finance, Decentraland, Algorand, Polygon, and Basic Attention Token earlier in 2021. For now, Solana will not be available to US users.
